CRONICLE OF THE EARLIS OF ROSS.

INCLUDING NOTICES OF

THE ABBOTS OF FEARN,

AND OF

THE FAMILY OF ROSS OF BALNAGOWN.

EDINBURGH.—MDCCCL.
EDINBURGH: T. CONSTABLE, PRINTER TO HER MAJESTY.
INTRODUCTION.

The Manuscript which is printed in the following pages, was found at Balnagown Castle, while arranging a large mass of old family papers. It was in very bad condition, the half of one of the leaves being entirely wanting. It is written in a hand of the early part of the seventeenth century; and internal evidence proves it to have been written previously to the year 1615.

After some inquiries, I was favoured by George Ross, Esq., of Pitcalnie, the heir-male of the earlier family of Ross of Balnagown, with the use of a manuscript of a much more recent date, probably about 1730, which was evidently, to a certain extent, a copy of the older one; and which contained, in a form nearly entire, not only those parts in which it was defective, but also some further particulars in reference to the Abbots of Fearn. When I was on the eve of putting the whole to press, I was so fortunate as, by mere accident, to stumble upon a MS. which had belonged to the late Mr. A. Deuchar, containing a recent transcript of the "Cronicle," which was happily complete in those passages where the others were effaced. I have thus been enabled to supply a complete copy of what has every appearance of being a chronicle of considerable antiquity; and I have had the instructions of Sir Charles W. A. Ross, now of Balnagown, to print it for private circulation among the friends of the family.

I shall not venture to offer any remarks on the authenticity of the facts which it professes to narrate. Although one or two of the earlier are of a dubious character, I have been enabled to verify many of the later by the documents in the Balnagown charter-chest; by the Kalendar of Ferne, a manuscript in the possession of the Duke of Sutherland, of which Mr. David Laing obligingly lent me the transcript made for the use of the Iona Club; and from other authentic sources. In an Appendix are printed a few interesting documents relative to the family history; and I have added to the whole some particulars on the same subject, for the purpose of connecting the Chronicle with the present time.

The Earls of Ross, in their connexion with the Lords of the Isles, have frequently formed a difficult and perplexed subject of investigation to the historian and antiquary; whether any further light is thrown on it by this Chronicle, it is not for the editor to decide.

It only remains to be noticed, that in a reprint of Buchanan's Scottish Surnames, included in the third volume of a publication entitled Miscellanea Scotica, (Glasgow, 1820,) will be found a very imperfect abridgment of this Chronicle; but from what source it was obtained, I have been unable to discover.

ANE BRIEVE CRONICLE OF THE EARLIS. OF ROSS.

In the yeir of God 1272 yeiris, Alexander the Third, King of Scottis, passit with his Laddy Queene Margaret, accompanyit with many nobillis and barones of Scotland, to London, to the coroneatioun of King Edward Langschanks, King of England, brother to the said King Alexander's wyffe; and on the assumptioun day of our Ladie in the same yeir ane thousand twa hundreth threscor and twelf yeiris, upon the sixteine day of November, was the coranatioun of the said king Edward at Londoun with great triumph. At this tyme, thair was ane Normand, ane Frenchman, callit Dougall Duncansone, in the said King Edwardis hous, of mervillous strenth, and had sic craft in wrasling, that he cuist all men that assilzeit him, netheles he was finallie wanquishit be Farq' Ross, ane Scottisman. The forsaid King Alexander, for his notabill wassilage, gaue to the said Farq' the erldome of Ross. Of this Farq'r descendit fyve erlis, being Ross of surname, vi₃ Farq'r the first, William the second, William the third, Hew the fourt, and William the fift ; but the sixth erle was namit Walter Ross, utherwayis Leslie, quha maryit the said fift erle of Ross his dochter, callit Euphame Ross. This Walter Ross alias Leslie was ane nobill, valʒeant man, quha made great service to the King of Scotland, and sough to his rewarde the heretrix of Ross, and callit himself Walter Ross alias Leslie, or ellis the said Euphame wald not mary him. The said Walter Ross alias Leslie, begat on the said Euphame Ross, onne sone callit Alexander, quha was callit Alex'r Ross als lang as his mother leivid, and thairefter was callit Alex'r Leslie ; quha was maryit on Duke Robert Steuart, governor of Scotland, his dochter, and begat with her onne dochter callit Marie, quha deyit virgin. Thairefter was Alexander Il a and Johnе Il a earlis of Ross. The said Williamе, quhilk was the fyft erll of Ross, hade two dochters, the eldest, Eupham Ross, maryit on Walter Ross alias Leslie as said is. The uther maryit on Donald of the Iles, quha strak the batell of Harlaw, in Garyeoche, up on Sanct James evin in the yeir of God anе thousand four hundreth and ellevin yeirès. In this battell was slaine nyne hundreth men, with two principal captaines, upon the syde of the said Donald of the Ilis. The name of the two captaines were Makillane and Malcometoche; and upon the erll of Mar syde war slaine Alexander Ogilbie, James Skrimgour, and many uthers, as the cronicles declaires in the 16 buik and 17 cap:

Now, let us come to the first erll of Ross, callit Ferq' Ross, quha made ane vow to God gif he overcame the forenamit Frenschman as God gaif him the victorie, that he should found ane abbay of the first religious men that he should happin to meit efter his victorie, within the erldome of Ross, and swa thairefter obtainit the victorie.

He chancit to meitt with two quhite channonis in Galloway, ane callit Malcome, with ane uther brother, haiffing certaine of Sanct Ninianis relictes with thame; quilk Malcome, with his brother, the said erll brought with him in Ross, and foundit ane abbay of that order and religioun at Farne, besyd Kincardin in Stracharrin, quhair the situation thereof yit does appeare; quairof the said Malcome was abbot fiftene yeiris, and thair he deceissit and was buryed there, quha was holden efter his death amongst the peopill as a sanct. And thairefter the said erll, with consent of the abbot and bretherene of the said place, for the more tranquilitie, peace, and quyetnes thairof, translated the said monasterie quhair now it presentlie standis, the xxvi yeir of the said Farq's erldome, and in the yeir of God ane thousand two hundreth\(^1\) In the qlk time, was the second abbot, Malcome of Nig. And the said erll leived erle fourtie yeiris, and deceissit in Tayne ane thousand two hundreth fiftie ane yeiris, in the beginning of the calendis of Feb: and succedidt to the said Farq\(^1\), William, his sone, and goodsone to the erll of Buchane, quha leived erll xxiii yeiris, and deyit at erllis allane the 20 cal-ends\(^2\) of Juny ane thousand two hundreth threscor fourtene yeiris. In his tyme, was the third abbot, Machabeus Makhersin. Unto the quilk Williame succeedit Williame his sone, quha was made erll at Witsonday the said yeir, quha leived erll fourtie nyne yeiris. In quhas time, Robert, erll of Carrike, made insurrexioun, pretending to the Croune of Scotland, and the king made confedderatioun with the said Williame. That Hew, quha was aire to the said Williame, in respect he had gotten him with the king his sister, callit Mauld, ane sone callit Williame, the said Williame, father to the said Hew, should mary the said Mauld. Quhilk Williame, for his fidelitie to the Realme, was long imprisoned in England, yet he reteired happilie to his awin, and depaerted at Delnay in Ross, the xxviii day of Januar one time of this erll Williame were divers abbottis of Ferne, that is ane Mertein, ane channon in Quhythorne, nocht chosin, but presentit be the pryor of Quhythorne, and ane uther brother Johne of the said hous of Quhythorne intrusit nocht chosin. The third abbot, callit Mark Ross, sone to St Mark Ross, ane Knight, nocht chosin be the convent of Ferne, but presentit be the said Pryor of Quhythorne.

Qlk Mark abbot enterit in the monasterie two yeiris before the deceis of erll Williame the second, and fande the said place destitute of idonius personis, ornamentes, biggings, and uthers gudes. Quha in his tyme governit the said place and kirk weill, als weill in brothers to be ressavit as alreddie ressavit, and according to the ordour instructit thame diligentlie. In tyme of this Mark, abbot forsaid, Hew, goodsone to the King, was made erll of Ross upon St. Patrike his day, the xvii day of March, efter the deceis of his father, ane thousand thrie hundreth and twentie thrie yeiris,¹ and leived erll ten yeiris;² and for the defence of the realme depairtit in the conflict of Hildonhill besyde

Unto quhome succedit Wilhame the third his sone, oy to King Robert Steuart, quha efter lang banishment in Norroway, came hame to his awin, and fand his men convertit to the obedience of England, quha manfullie gatherit ane great armie and invadit the toun of Pearth, quhair Englishmen was, and drew watter frome them, quhilk constrainit thame to depart furth out of the said town for ever. And as Judas Machabeus, ane strong man, persuit the wicket men within Israel quha was partakers of the comon welth unto the death, swa the said erll Williame perseuit the wicket people to the death; haiffing in reverence, favour, and kindness keiping, all zealous persons of the laws of God, religious and ecclesiasticall persones, helping, re-edifying, and supplying the biggings and manorplaces of his predeccessors in sundrie pairtes of Ross, amplifying the same honorablie. Quha was made erll efter returning from his exyle, upon Friday, before Whitsonday, ane thousand thrie hundreth and threttie sex. In quhas name, becaus the abbay kirk of Ferne bot of clay and rouch staine alutterlie rewinous appeirandlie, the said Wilhame being trublit of mynd with anguish, that the sepulture of his fathers, parentis, and quhair he tendit to be buryed quhenever God callit him out of this mortall lyffic, and that ignominontlie the dropis descending from heaven distilled in the challice and upon the altar quhair the sacrament was ministrat, erll William with diligence callit to counsell Bischope Rodger, then Bischop of Ross, with the haill clergie thairof, and all the great men in Ross, with consent of Mark, then abbot of Ferne, and convent thairof. Swa it was con-cludit that seven bretherene that then wer in the place, winglie oblist thameselfis to povertie, and to beg and thig through the country; the abbot onlie to remaine in the place for attending on the warke new then begun for bigging of the said kirk there of hewin staines. Swa the warke thairof was begun the second yeir efter the said William was maid erll of Ross, that is ane thousand thrie hundreth threttie aucht; and the abbot Mark deyit amangs his bretherene efter the bigging of the said warke, an e thousand three hundreth fiftie fyve, and was honorable buryit within the said kirk as he deservit. Unto the q1k Mark succedit Donald Pupill. In this maner, the said erll Wilhame the third, considering the channonis of Ferne had frie power of electione be Pape Urban the fourt, in quha’s time they war foundit, and others fra the begining of the said ordour, geving thame speciall priviledgis, the said erll, willing to keip all juris to the said religious men, that nethar electioun nor presentatioun schould be had fra utheris, but within the said abbay, according to the institutioun of Augustin, that sum worthie persones be electit out of the bosome of the said place. Quhilk convent, religiouslie and duelie, as accordes, for thair interes, electit and presentit the said Donald abbot, quha refussit the samyne for the jure of presentation, quilk he had of Quhythorne, albeit not justlie; quha shortlie efter his elec-tioun in Ferne, quhen all the bretherene consentit him to be abbot, he, accompanyit with ane brother callit John Abernethie, * * * to Quhythorne to the Pryor thairof in his earrand of electioun; quhair efter many ressonis and controversies, the Prior of Quhythorne and Convent thairof confrirmit and approvit of the electioun of the said Donald, made at Ferne in the dayes of this erll Williame. And in the said abbot Donald his time, the stane warke of the said abbey kirk was endit, and the timber wark thairof be the supply of the said erll was finishit. This is that gude erll Williame,\footnote{On 5th March 1355, Earl William granted a deed to the Abbey relieving it and its lands, &c. of payment of all taxes.—B.} doar and repairar of all the place of Ferne, quha grantit to the samyne for his saull and his predecessor, the kirk of Tarridie, in Ross, that was at his presenttatioun, and obtenit consent of the abbay of Ferne thair-upon of the Bishop and chapter of Ross, for quhas saull everie channon under great Payne was appoyntit ilk day to say ane mess at the hie altar. Quilk Williame leived erll threttie five yeiris, and was bannischt in Narroway thrie yeiris, and deceissit at Dalny in Ross, the nynt of Februar ane thousand thrie hundreth thriescor ellevin yeiris.\(^1\) Thair succeddit the said abbot Donald, Adame Monilaw, quha deceissit at Ferne the tent day of September, ane thousand four hundreth and sevin yeiris. \(^2\) And in his tyme was ane Lord of Ross, ane nobill and valzeant man, callit Walter Leslie, quha maryit Euphame Ross, dochter to the said erll William, repairer of the forsaid abbay of Ferne, quha depairtit at Pearce the penult day of Februar ane thousand thrie hundreth fourscor ane yeiris; and to him succeddit Alexander Leslie his sone, erll, quha maryit ane dochter of Duik Robert, Governor of Scotland, and gat with hir ane dochter callit Marie, that deceissit ane virgin; and the said Alexander deceissit at Dingwall in his young age, the aught day of May,

\(^1\) On 13th April 1350, Earl William, with consent of his sister Marjory, Countess of Caithness, granted a letter of tailzie of the earldom, &c. in favour of Hugh de Ross, his brother, provided he himself died without heirs male of his body.—B.

ane thousand four hundreth and two yeiris.) And efter that Thormas Kethirnathie, send by the pryor of Quhythorne, stude as abbot in the ressaiving and expending of the fruits of Ferne for ane certaine tyme, and becaus he sped not as he wald, he retyred hame; he was supponit to be ane sensuall and fleshlie hooremaister, but what his end was it is uncertaine. And efter this was ane abbot Finlaw, oy of St William Feriar, Vicar of Tayne, quha for ane certaine tyme governit the place in ressaiving and expending the gudes thairof; he theikit the kirk of Ferne, and deyit thair the fifteen of October 1436 yeiris. (And thairefter Alexander Ila was erll of Ross and Justice for the north; he was valzeant in all his actes, and lovinglie governit the erldome in tranquilitie and peace, and deyit at Dingwall, and was buryit at the channerie of Ross, the aucht day of May, ane thousand four hundreth fourtie and nyne reiris. He maryit Euphame, dochter to the said Walter Leslie, quhairby he was erll of Ross. King James the first, 1426, beheaded James Campbell for the murther of Johne of the Iles, a man dearlie belovit of his people. In the next yeir following, quhilk was efter the incarnatioun 1427, Alexander, Lord of the Iyllis, was arreistit be the king at Inverness, for that he was accusit to be ane sucourer and mainteaner of theivs and robberis in the countrie. But for as meikle as he promissit in tyme coming to reforme the former misdemeanours, and was pardonit and set at libertie, quhairoff ensewit great trubill immediatlie efter; for schortlie upon his deliverance he gatherit a power of wickit scaphriftis, alias reivars and sorneris, and with the same coming into Inverness, brunt the town and beseigit the castell, inforceing with all diligence upon the same, till he was advertised that the king was coming towards him with ane great power, quhairupon he fled incontinent to the Iyllis. Finallie, haiffing knowledge that a great number of people lay daylie in wait to tak him, that they might put him to the kingis handis, he came disaguysed in ane pure array to Holyrudhos, and thair finding the king on Paschday devoutly in the kirk at his prayeres, he fell down on his kneis before him, and besocht him of grace, for his saik that rose as that day frome deith unto lyffe. At request of the Queene, the King pardonit him of lyffe, but he appointit Williame Douglas, erll of Angus, to haiff the custodie of him, and that within the castell of Tantallon, that no trubill should ryse be his meanis thairefter. His mother, Euphame, dochter to Walter sumtyme erll of Ross, was also committit in warde in Sanct Colme’s Insch, becaus it was knowin that she solicited her sone Alexander to rebell in manner as is aforesaid against the King. Nocht long efter, Donald Ballache, brother to the said Lord Alex\textsuperscript{r} of the Iyllis, came with ane great power of men unto Lochquhaber. The erlls of Mar and Caithnes came with sic number of thair people as they could raise to defend the countrie against the invasion of these hylandmen and Donald, at Inverlochie, where the earle of Caithness was slaine, and the earle of Marr discomfited. Herewith did Donald Balloch return [with a very] great pray of goods and riches into the Isles. The King was sorely moved with the newis hereof, came with a great armie unto Dunstaffage, purposing with all speed to pass into the Iyllis. The clanns and other chiefsmen [of the hylands] advertissit hereof, cam to Dunstaffage and submitted thairselfs to the King, excusing their offence (for that as they alledgit) the said Donald had constrained them against their willis to pes with him in the last journey. All these clans upon this thair excuse were admitted to the King's favour, and sworn to persew the said Donald unto the death. Shortly heirefter the said Donald fled into Ireland, where he was slain, and his head send be ane Odo, a great Lord in Ireland, (in quhas countrie he lurked,) as a present to the King, that lay as than at Striveleng. There were also three hundred of his adherents takin, and by the King’s commandment hanged for their offence within three weeks space after his fleeing into Ireland, betwixt the years 1454 and 1455 years. There was ane callit Donald, earle of Ross, in the tyme that the earl Douglas came out of England invading the Scottismen, he tint the field; his brother Archibald Douglas was slaine, the Lord of Ormond, beand Douglas, was hurte and tane. The said earle of Douglas fled to Dunstaffage, quhair finding the said Donald, earle of Ross and Lord of the Iylis, he procurit to him, by nature inclynit and ready enough to follow such counsel, to mak war in his favour against the King, and after he had set him anes on warke, he got him back again into England. Donald wastit not only the King’s possessions that lay near to Dunstaffage, but also passing through Ardgyll, did much hurt in all places where he came. He invadit so the Ile of Arran, and chased the Bischope of Lismore, constraining him to take sanctuarie. This done, he entered into Lochaber, and so into Mur-rayland, where he burnt the town of Inverness, wan the castle by a guileful trayne.† Meantyme the earl of Ormond after he recoverit of his hurte, as Boetius writes, was presented into the King, and efter he had remained in prison a long tyme he was at length beheaded. Moreover, the Countess Beatrice she saw no hope left that the earl Douglas schoold recover his former estate, came to the King and submitted hirself, laying all the blame on the erll, quha had procured hir unto such unlawful marriage with him, being hir former husband's brother. The King ressavit hir richt courteouslie, and gave to hir the Baronie of Balknie to meantean therewith hir estate. Shortly efter the Countes of Ross fled frome hir husband, and came to the King for feare of hir husband's crueltie, which partly she had taisted alreddie. The King, because he had made the marriage betwixt hir and hir husband, assyned hir forthwith sufficient revenues also for the maintenance of her estate.

In the yeir of God 1455, the King acquitted the Isles, and gat obedience thereof that they war in reddines to serve the wares, speciallie Donald of the Iyllis and erle of Ross, who had befoir joyned himself in confedderacie with the erles of Douglas and Crawfurde against the King, and had taken in his hand the Kingis house and castell of Inverness, (as befoir ye haiff herd,) naming himself King of the Iyllis. Nevertheless the King at the lenth gave pardon to the said Donald for trew obedience in tyme coming, providing he wald not enter to his former deilling of evill doings.

King James the Seconde was slaine with the wadge of a Gunn at Roxburgh, in the yeir of his lyffe xxix, and of his reign 24, and efter the incarnation 1460. Then did Regentis governe the realme.

Moreover, shortly efter Donald of the Iyllis and erll of Ross being reconciledd, began new to his old maneris, spoilzeing and harryng the haill countrie of Atholl, and tuik the erll and countess thereof captives to the Iyllis. The saids regentis preparing ane armie to pass on the said Donald, trew advertisement cam that the said Donald was striken with madness, and lost all his ships in the sea, and the spuilzies that he tuik. The erll of Atholl and his lady war restored; and the said Donald himsellf was slain in the castell of Inverness, be ane clairshear that playit on ane clersha, in the year 1461. The clershear said he wald play ane spring that he never herd befoir nor yit efter, and so cutted his throat, for the said Donald slew his fether. The said Donald’s son was callit Lord of the Iyllis and erll of Ross.

In July, the fourt day, in the yeir of God 1476, ane Parliament wes haldin at Edr in the quhilk John, Lord of the Iyllis and erll of Ross, was attendid paitly for his awin evill deids, but maist speciallie for the defaultis of his father, Donald, Lord of the Iyllis. In May, in the yeir of God 1477, the King raissit ane puissant armie of the maist abill men upon the north side of the watter of Forth, to pursew the Lord of the Iyllis baith be sea and land. The erll of Crawfurde was made admirall of the sea; and the erll of Atholl, the King’s uncle by his father, was livetennent of the armie be land. Bot such meanis was used be the erll of Atholl, that the Lord of the Iyllis humbled himselff to the King’s pleasar upon certaine conditionis; and thairupon, in the beginning of July next ensewing, the said Lord of the Iyllis came to the Parliament at Edinburgh, and thair was the aggreement made and confirmit betwixt the King and him. He resynit in the Kingis handis all the richt he had to the erlldome of Ross. Swa the King came to the erlldome of Ross, the lands of Kinteer and Knapdles. Qk erlldome the King annexit to the crowne, and pardonit him and his servands of all offences befoir that day committed, and invested him of new in the lordschip and signorie of the Iyllis, and uthers his landis nocht released, to hold the same of the King be service of warde and relieff. The King also gaiff to the erll of Atholl for his diligence shewed in reducing the said Lords of Iyllis to ordour, the lands and forestes of Clonic. The said Johne Ila was erll of Ross and Lord of the Iyllis enduring his lyftyme, and that graciouslie by the King’s gift.
In time of the said John, was Abbot Finlay Mackfaid, (whose succession by the King's desire was called Fearns to this day. The first was Mr. John Fearn, father to Alex' Fearn, of Balnasirach,) who honourably held the Abbay of Fearn, in his time in guidness and rest, and did many good and laudable works. He bigget Saint Michael's Isle on the south side of the kirk. He founded the Dortour; he bigget the cloister; he brought home an tabernacle, and Lettron of brass, the organs, with the challices, vestments, and sundry other ornaments out of Flanders, and payed all the same himself. He lived Abbot forty-four years; he virtuously governed his abbay and convent as well young as old, and celebrating their divine service night and day; he deceast among his brethern at Fern, on St. Boniface day, the 17th day of March 1485 yeares. Unto him succeeded Abbot Thomas M'Culloch, who lived Abbot 31 yeares; he bigged furth the Dortour, and was sinistruously and wrongously put out of the Abbay be Andrew Stuart, Bishop of Caithness; the said Bishop of Caithness being resavit with the Abbot of Fearn, well treated with him, he caused ane Nottary give a false instrument to Rome, and brought home brievis on the same, and made himself Abbot and Bishop of Fearn; through the whilk the said Abbot Thomas M'Culloch took great displeasure, because he was masterfully put out of Fearn; and dwelt in Midd Genie, where he bigged ane chappel to himself so long as he lived, to serve his God, and got nothing of the Abbacy of Fearn but the Miln and Mid Geny, whereof he made a Mens; and the said Thomas M'Culloch dyed at Fearn, the 17th day of Jully 1516 yeares. And after him succeeded the said Bishop Andrew Stuart of Caithness, who was the first Commendator of Fearn granted be the See of Rome, who lived undoubted Abbot of Fern ane year, and dyed at Skibo, the 17th day of June 1517, and was buryed in the Quire of the Cathedral Church of Dornoch. And after him succeeded Mr. Patrick Hamiltown, who was accused for heresie be James Beaton, Archbishop of St. Andrews, Primat of Scotland, with the counsell of the haill clergie of Scotland, and was decerned to be burnt, and delivered in the seculars hands for diverse articles of heresie, grounded upon Luther's laws, viz':—That man had no free will; that man is in sin as long as he lives; that children incontinent after their baptism are sinners; all Christians that be worthy to be called Christians do know that they are in grace; no man is justified by works, but by faith only; sound works makes not an good man, but an good man makes good works; that faith, hope, and charity are so knitt, that he that has one has the rest, and he that wants one of them, wanteth the rest; upon the whilk articles the said Archbishop gave sentence definitive at the Metropolitan kirk of St. Andrews, the last day of February 1527, where the said Mr. Patrick Hamiltoun was burnt in presence of Gavin, Bishop of Glasgow; George, Bishop of Dunkell; John, Bishop of Brechin; William, Bishop of Dunblane; Patrick, Prior of St. Andrews; David, Abbote of Arbrothok; George, Abbot of Dunfermling; Alexr. Abbote of Cumbuschkynoch; Henry, Abbot of Lindores; John, Prior of Pittenwemyss; the Dean and Sub-Dean of Glasgow; Mr. Hugh Spence, Thomas Ramsay, and Allan Meldrum. He lived Abbot ten years, and after him succeeded Abbot Donald Denoon, who lived Abbot 15 yeares and 5 months, and governed the place in tranquility and rest dureing his time, and deceased at Fearn, the 9th day of February 1540. And to him succeeded Robert Carnecors, Bishop of Ross, who lived Abbot 5 years, and deceast in the Chanonry of Ross, where he was burried, the last day of November 1545 years; and to him succeeded James Carnecors, who demitted the said Abbacy in favors of Nicolas Ross, then Provost of Tain, who lived Abbot 22 years, and dyed at Fearn, the 17th day of September 1569 years, and was buryed in the north side of the Quire of Fearn. And after him succeeded Mr. Thomas Ross, Parson of Alnes, who was provyded to the said Abbacie, three years before said Nicholas departed, as the said Mr. Thomas Ross's provision declares at more length, of the date at Edinburgh, the 12th day of October 1566 yeares; who theikit the Dortour of Fearn after it was burnt be negligence of Hutcheon M'Culloch, now in Reifadden; and he made a hall, chambers, cellars, pantry, and kitchen of the same, in respect the old house was decayed; he caused to joist and loft the chamber and pantry, caused make such turnpicks and easements in Fearn to the hall, cellars, and vaults, &c. The said Mr. Thomas Ross caused build the litle chamber beside the Dortour, joisted, lofted, and theikit the same; whilk Dortour and little chamber was burnt be the said Hutchon 16 years before the said Mr. Thomas was Abbote. Notwithstanding the said Mr. Thomas Ross gart bigg in Fearn two stone barns and the miln with stone and clay, he biggit an new miln bewest the place of Fearn, which was going, and won what was worth the bigging of the same, till Alexr Ross of litle Tarrell molested him ere he departed, and the miln decayed in default of beiting and holding up of the same. The said Alexr Ross of litle Tarrell departed, (as God knows,) at litle Tarrell, the fourth day of January 1567 years, and was burryed in Tain, the 5th day of the same moneth. The said Mr. Thomas Ross built in Tain divers houses, yards, barns; thereafter the said Mr. Thomas Ross for the most part of ten years, being boasted be Alexander Ross of Balnagowan, was out of Ross, and dwelt in Murray, in the town of Forres, where he conquest lands to build on both the sides of the road, and some field land, and made great expenses in Murray in householding, which he rather to have made in Ross among his own friends if they had suffered him to remain among them, and payed him his own liveing; albeit none held his liveing from him, but the surname of Ross. It is not remembered be Alex. Ross, old laird of Balnagowen, how the said Mr. Thomas Ross served Mr. Henry Sinclair, Bishop of Ross, for seven yeares gratis, and sought nothing for his fee and reward, but that the said Bishop would be so good of his goodness as to give the said laird of Balnagowen his chief, for the singular love he buire to him for the time, certain steiding and fishings, which was upon and about the said Balnagowen his lands, and was most meet for him, yea meeter for him than for any except the laird of Fowlis, who had some lands adjacent thereto, viz., the Davoch of Carbsdale, and offered great sums of money for the same; notwithstanding the said Bishop caused the said Mr. Thomas Ross send for the said laird of Balnagowen to come to Edinburgh, and to receive such lands as after follows, in feu gratis, viz., Ardgay, ane Davoch of lands of great bounds of gressings; the Kirktown of Kincardine; yaire, and salmon fishing of the same, which will make yearly ane last of salmond or thereby; the town of Eddertoun and pendicles thereof, which will hold twenty-three ploughs, with fair meadows and wards adjacent thereto, with the mihn of Kincardin, which is worth twenty-four bolls victual. The hai1 lands above written will occupie twenty-four ploughs, besides shealls and grassings; whilk land, grassings, and fishings above written, when the said Bishop gave them gratis to him, he desyred the said laird to recompence the said Mr. Thomas Ross for his fee and reward, which the Bishop should have given him, in respect he gave the said lands gratis to the laird of Balnagow at the said Mr. Thomas his desire; notwithstanding the said Bishop took from the good Sherriff of Cromarty, called Alex' Urquhart, three thousand marks for worse land and less of profite, who held the said Bishop in his house of Cromarty ane half year well treated and entertained, in respect his own house of Chanonry was holden from him by Mr. Donald Fraser, Archdeacon of Ross, and such reward as the said Mr. Thomas Ross got from the said laird of Balnagowan, it is known, viz., evil deeds for guid, he held and holds ane part of his liveing from him, and put him out of his father’s Roume called Culinaha and Annat, he rests to him of his liveing of Fearn a great sum of money, viz., four thousand pounds Scots. George Ross, the young laird of Balnagowan, was resting to the said Abbot three thousand merks, which the said Abbot forgave him for ane petty grassing in the Highlands, called Garvarie, above Kincardin, in Strathcharron. The said Mr. Thomas Ross deceast in Tain, the fourteenth day of February 1595 yeares, and was burryed at Fearn in St. Michael’s Isle.¹

No. IV.

[The famous Simon Lord Lovat was at one time an ally of David Ross of Balnagown. They were first-cousins, and the latter appears to have taken some charge} of Lovat's defence when under the accusation of having used violence in compassing his marriage with the widow of his predecessor. The following Declaration, found among the Balnagown papers, signed by Lady Lovat, and regularly attested by five most respectable witnesses, appears well worthy of being preserved, as another of the various stratagems used by this extraordinary man to save himself from the consequences of his crime.]

Wee, Æmilia, Lady Lovat, do, by these, solemnly declare to all herein concerned, that because of my being lately married to Mr. Simon Fraser of Bewfort, there have several debates and contestations arisen among our friends and relations thereanent, even to the interesting the public government to interpose its royal authority against my said husband, and his friends and kinsmen, to our no small grief and disquiet, being that it tends to the utter ruin and excision of this your countrie, and all the gentlemen and others therein: Therefore, to prevent any further mistakes on the foresaid accompt, either in this countrie, or elsewhere the same happens to be called in question, wee, the saids Lady Emilia of Lovate, assert, affirm, and absolutely declare to all and every one that has interest in me, either heir or elsewhere, that the said Master Simon Fraser of Bewfort is my undoubted husband; and that, without any force or compulsion whatsoever, I consented to be his lawful espoused wyfe, and shall, by God's help, continue so during all the dayes of my lyfetyme, and chirrish and maintain that love and affectione to him that a wyfe owes to a husband, and adheres to him in all events, and desyres he may be owned as such by all in whom I am nearly concerned. These presents I have signed att Erchles, with my own hand, before these honourable witnesses, Hugh Ross of Kilravock, Mr. Simon M'Kenzie of Allangrange, John Cuthbert, younger of Castlehill, and John M'Baine, mer' in Inverness, upon the sixteenth day of November 1697 years, with John Chisolme, Laird of Comie, and Allan Cameron of Lochquych.

A. Lovett.

Upon the death of David Ross (3) of Balnagown in the year 1712, the estates passed, by separate destination, to the Hon. Charles Ross, Colonel-General of Dragoons, second son of George eleventh Lord Ross of Halkhead.

Although of the same name, no relationship between the two families can now be traced; their armorial bearings were different, and they were settled in different parts of Scotland. But a very intimate alliance appears to have existed between them for fully a hundred years previously; the Lords Ross had large wadsets over the lands; and in one instance the then laird had settled the estate, failing heirs of his own body, on the family of Lord Ross.¹ David Ross had no heirs nearer than the descendant of his great-great-grandfather, Ross of Pitcalnie. Balnagown was a Whig and a Presbyterian, and his lady was a great pillar of the Kirk, while Pitcalnie was a Tory and a Jacobite. Political considerations, therefore, made it desirable to establish in the position of laird of Balnagown, and, to a certain extent, chief of the clan of Ross, a man of sound principles and of powerful influence. General Ross was a Tory, but no Jacobite.

General Ross died in 1732, after executing an entail of the estates, to which he had added Logie, a property closely adjacent to the castle. He was succeeded by his nephew Charles, second son of George, thirteenth Lord Ross, who was killed in 1745, at the battle of Fontenoy. He, again, was succeeded by his father, who died in 1754, and was also succeeded by his son William, fourteenth, and last Lord Ross. He survived only two months, on which the estate devolved on James Lockhart, the son of Grizel, daughter of William, twelfth Lord Ross, and Sir James Lockhart of Carstairs, Bart. He died without issue in 1760, and was succeeded by Sir John Lockhart Ross, a very eminent Naval Officer. The present baronet is Sir John’s grandson.

The estates formed the subject of several very keenly contested lawsuits, between Sir James and his son Sir John on the one side, and Pitcalnie, as heir-of-line and heir-male of David Ross, and also Mr. Gilmour of Craigmiller, and John Murray, Esq., as descended from other branches of the Halkhead family, in whose favour David Ross had at different times executed settlements.

George Ross, Esq., of Pitcalnie, now claims the character of heir-male of the older family of Ross of Balnagown, and of the Earls of Ross, as being descended from Nicolas Ross, the son of Alexander Ross of Balnagown, by his second wife, Catherine Mackenzie, daughter of Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail.
